The prisoners were then taken upstairs and araigned before Judge Cullen.

Moritz Herzberg was first arraigned. He pleaded act guilty to a charge of bringing men over to register illegally.

District-Attorney Ridgway asked that an examination be made at once, but on motion of the defendant's counsel, the examination was set for Saturday morning at 11 o'clock.

The District-Attorney then begged that 10,000 bail be required to insure the prisoner's appearance, for, he said, there was over a dozen complaints against him, smd he wishes to present the case to the Grand Jury on Monday morning.

Judge Cullen set bail at $5,000. Aaron Herzberg was then arraigned and his case was similarly disposed of.
At this ex-Judge Morris jumped to his feet and said that he understood that there was a warrant out for the arrest of Supervisor John Y. McKane.
All the accused was a set of Supervisor John All the accused was a set of Supervisor John Y. McKane. All the accused men pleaded not guilty and were remanded to Raymond Street jail until Saturday morning.

McKane brought Joseph Kuntz, the New York brewer, into court and he went bail for the Herzbergs. He said he owned property worth $300,000, which was mortgaged for $140,000.

District Attorney Ridgway to-day received two copies of the Gravesend registration books, and it shows a registration of 1,400 voters. This is for two days only. Last year's total registration only amounted to 800 men, and this fact, together with the confession of George Birney, one of the prisoners, shows that wholesale colonization has been attempted by the Herz-kers.

It was expected that he would pose as a martyr and claim that it was a "job" put up by the "Boss" McLaughlin crowd. His personal appearance and deep interest in the matter in company of Herzberg settles the question of guilt in the opinion of the detectives and will probably lead to the arrest and prosecution of McLane. ane. Headquarters detectives have warrants for sundreds of colonizers who left the city to tote at Coney Island, and they will be arrested before or on the day of election.

It is a curious fact that all the money drawn from the Republican National Committee should be for the arrest of voters colonized to swell Harrison's vote, John Y. McKane having declared his intention to support the Republican National, State and gounty tickets.

John Beckham, Gen. Ramsay's lieutenant and fellow prisoner in the Jersey City election arrest, went before Justice Lane this morning and made an affidavit supporting that of Gen. Ramsay in the charge of per-jury made against 'Longshoreman Charles Keefe.

It is said that Keefe is to be arrested on a charge of illegal registry at two polling places.

The Republicans claim that he was making a third attempt on his own responsibility when he accused Beckham and Ramsay of attempting to bribe him to do it.

DRAWN FROM DAY TO DAY BY "EVENING A BANK PRESIDENT.

Experts Open the Big Vault of the Fulton National Bank in Brooklyn-They Bad to Do It, Because the Cashier Couldn't -A Bolt Fell Out of Place and Kept the Bank's Resources Under Lock.

At 3,30 o'clock this morning the steelbound vault of the Fulton National Bank of Brooklyn was cracked by a gang of expert safe-breakers The vault contained all the bank's valu-

As a matter of fact it was simply a friendly act of burgling, that was entered into with the full consent of President Hazzard and Cashier Noxsen, and accomplished, much to their satisfaction.

The gang of cracksmen were led by E. M.

Brooklyn, who built the vault twenty years ago.

He and his men had been working on a refractory lock on the inner door of the vault ever since 9 o'clock yesterday morning.

Shortly before that hour the paying-teller, Mr. Kenmore, had srrived at the bank, and according to his usual custom had proceeded to open the vault to get the books out. The outer door worked rather stiffly, but when he came to the iron door of the inner compartment, although the combination worked all right, the boit would not move, and all efforts to open the door proved unsuccessful. The discovery created some consternation among the officers of the bank, and Mr. Hendrickson, the maker, was sent for immediately. He said it might take three days to get it open, and that made the bank officials still more fluried, because the closing-up business of the month is always heavy, and any delay would put them away back in their business and give their depositors lots of trouble.

A kit of burglars' tools and a can of gunowder were brought into requisition by the

A kit of burglars' tools and a can of gun-A kit of burgiars' tools and a can of gun-powder were brought into requisition by the friendly cracksmen and they began their work at once. It was not found necessary to use the gunpowder, for by cutting a jagged piece out of the steel door of the vault the bolt which had fallen out of place was ex-posed and the cause of the difficulty quickly removed.

Everything in the vault was found to be in Everything in the vault was found to be in order, and this morning business at the bank was resumed at the usual hour. The only difference was that the clerks had to work livelier, and will probably have to stay after hours to-night to straighten out the books. Yesterday the necessary exchanges were made by giving depositors and customers checks on other banks.

A Flintlock Relie Which Isn't Claimed to Have Been Deerslayer's.

In the show window of a gun store in Maiden lane rests an interesting relie of bygone days.

It is a fintlock smooth-bore, such as were renowned Natty Bumpo, of Cooper's e, first pegan his conscientious slaughter . deer and Indians.

It is not claimed by the owners that this suggestion of crude times, now so rare and suggestion of crude times, now so rare and valuable, ever belonged to the Deerslayer, or that it even killed a deer, much less that it is the veritable Killdeer with which the famous hunter could pierce the bodies of two pigeons as their courses seemed to intersect in the air, revealing to the sight only one bird for about the hundredth part of a second: but what is asserted is, that it is very, very old, and has been used in stirring scenes.

A rough piece of finit is fastened at the hammer, and shows the effects of firing by nicks and hollows where the fiint has been chipped off.

nicks and hollows where the flint has been chipped off.

The flint is brought into contact with the priming pan in something the same way that the hammer of a modern gun is made to hit the firing pin. Perhaps a better comparison could be made to the common, every-day, single-barrelled, muzzle-loading shotgun, such as little boys shoot people with when they didn't know it was loaded.

A more swkward-looking gun would be hard to imagine. The stock is ill-shaped, with scarcely any drop, and the flint, when raised, interferes with the sight.

On the barrel is an inscription in Spanish. There are two flint-lock pistols, constructed on a similar plan, in the window.

As they drew near, one of the girls, a giddy blonde, said to the other: "Fanny, let's go in and take something."

There was a familiar sound to the expression, but coming from feminine lips the reporter at first almost forgot what it meant. The next moment he followed them into the store, and bought five cents' worth of taffy as an excuse for seeing what dreadful thing they did their behalf by the zealous support they are giving Senator Edward F. Reilly in his canvass for the County Clerkship.

Over a bundred organizations of workingmen who remember Senator Reilly's efforts at Albany have, unsolicited, passed resolutions pledging him their support, and the list is constantly being added to. The plate printers, the Eccentric Association of Engineers and the brushmakers are the latest accessions.

Among the measures for championing which Senator Reilly is supported are the bill compelling a reduction in the price of gas, the Saturday Half-Holiday bill and the bill to investigate the telephone monopoly. The Anti-Monopoly League bears testimony to Senator Reilly's continual crusade against monopoly.

Henry E. Abbey, whose contract with Coquelin and Mme. Jane Hading expires in April, was anxious, it is said, to continue as their manager until at least May 1. When, however, this was suggested to Coquelin, that gentleman showed that he had very decided ideas on the subject, and that nothing would induce him to again play with Mme. Hading. He said that his contract with Mr. Abbey was such as to necessitate his appearing with the lady up to and including a date in April; that he intended to fulfil his contract to the letter, but as to playing beyond that time he positively declined to do so, even for financial considerations. The ill feeling between the artists has not been exaggerated. Only the other day there was a fresh annovance by the discovery that Mme. Hading had written a letter to one of the Paris papers in which she said some rather unpleasant things about her colleague. Since the arrival of the aforesaid paper here Coquelin has been quietly indignant. Mr. Abbey is considering the possibility of pusying Coquelin for three or four weeks at the end of the term covered by his present contract, in New York, Boston and perhaps Philadelphia, without Hading. If he decides to do so these cities may see the great French artist at regular prices; that is to say, minus the extra charges at present prevailing. Abbey was such as to necessitate his appearthe extra charges at present prevailing.

Duncan B. Harrison, of "Paymaster" note, is very elated because he won his suit against W. W. Tillotson the other day. Mr. Harrison sued the latter gentleman for $700 which he claimed for having booked "Evangeline's tour last year. The case came up before Judge Browne in the City Court, Part II., and Mr. Harrison was accorded, not only his $700, but the interest upon it. By the bye, Mr. Harrison has just telegraphed to Harry Pitt, of Boston, about Bronson Howard's new military play which, he has been told, is to be called "From '61 to '65." This, Mr. Harrison claims, is the title of his own melodrama, and he is anxious that Mr. Pitt should warn Mr. Howard of danger ahead in case he infringes the titular copyright.

Miss Kate Foley, the vivacious little soubrette, was in the city yesterday. "Drifting Apart," the company in which she is at present playing, and in which she seems to have won golden opinions, is "laying off" election week. "It is such a delightful company to be in," said Miss Foley yesterday. "In fact it is heavenly. Everything is so pleasant and jolly. Mr. and Mrs. Herne are such excellent friends to be with, and—well, as I said before, it is heavenly."

When Thatcher, Primrose and West's big When Thatcher, Primrose and West's big minstrel organization is taken across the continent by Manager Al. Hayman, he will provide a special car. The company will visit important territory new to minstrelsy. It will consist of fifty people, and will appear in Montana, Colorado. Dakota, Utah and California. Mr. Hayman says he intends to handle the company in the same manner as he did the Madison Square and Lyceum The-atre companies. atre companies.

Herbert Kelcey is home. (Imagine three ex-clamation points here. They look better imagined than printed.) He was seen as early as 11.46 yesterday morning, taking the first of his Broadway promenades. It was nearly dusk before he was seen again. By some un-pardonable error one of his trunks was de-layed in transit from Boston, and as this trunk contained an awfully swell overcoat, Kelcey was in despair. The theatrical season is now fully under way. Kelcey is home.

> One night Adolph essorted Estelle home from the theatre, and an hour afterwards some one was heard groaning near the house.

Estelle was an actress of very minor parts and Adolph was far above her in the profession, well paid and handsome.

The hot days of Summer were approaching, and the theatre was to be closed for repairs and improvements. Only twelve nights

This, as the doctor informed Estelle, would be a very dangerous matter in Adolph's present weak state, and that he should not be removed for two weeks yet.

Estelle went up to her own room and wept, The old woman would turn him out, and he would be lame for life. It would ruin him in his profession.

While she was weeping the comb fell out of her hair, and its silky weight fell upon her shoulders.

"Till do it," she said. "Anything sooner than he should suffer so," and putting on her than he should suffer so," and putting on her head in a kerchief. She had looked in a glass.

they had broken his leg and cut his head open in the struggle. It was a long time before Adolph could tell how it happened, and then he confided to Estelle that he had not been remarkably economical, and all the money he had in the world was in his stolen pocketbook.

Estelle had just £11, and that was soon expended in medicine and rent. The theatre was closed and there was nobody to call upon. The landlady began to demand her money, and threatened if the money was not paid to have Adolph sent to the bospital.

Estelle was at the theatre the first day of the rehearsal.

The first object that she saw was Mme.
Laporte, the leading lady, with Estelle's hair on. fastened by some mysterious band or comb, so that one would have sworn it grew upon the leading lady's scalp. She looked as though she had never met Estelle before.

She walked towards the entrance and met Adolph. He started, looked at her and held out his hand.

"Estelle!" he cried, "have you been ill?" She shook her head.

"What has happened to your hair?" he asked in a lower voice, though the leading lady heard it.

"I cut it off," said Estelle again.
"You've made a fright of yourself," said devi must have tempted you to get rid of your only beauty. Such hair as yours! Great heaven!"

Estelle threw his hand from her and ran away. Adolph stood staring after her, and then and there the leading lady caught him by the arm.

She was richer than Estelle, but she had a heart; for she marched him into her dressing room, and there, with her back against the door, took off Estelle's hair.

"That's where it is," she said laconically. And Adolph stared in wonder.

"She sold it to me," said the lady. "I found out why afterwards. My doctor told me he attended you. They were going to turn you out of house and home as the risk of your life, and she cut her hair off so pay the landlady. You'd been making leve to her, of course, and she was silly she ut you, and now you snub her for it. And she has not told you a word."

And when the door was opened he departed, hot tears in his eyes, and something in his throat that choked him, in search of Estelle. He found her in her little room under the eaves, flung down upon the floor, sobbing as though her heart would break, and took her in his arms, Whatever he had thought or meant, he thought and meant only what was noble and honorable now.

"Extelle, my darling," he said, "don't cry so! I did not conceive that—that—How could you make such a sacrifice for a fellow like me? I've just found it out. I".

"The not crying for my hair," she said, "lis better to lose it than that you should have been lame for life—a great deal better, even if it is my only beauty. And you hate me and think me a fright!"

"Hate you!" He caught her closer to him. "Do I look as though I hated you? I fell in love with your hair; but it is you I love, Forgive my rude words, darling, and tell me I may love you always and have you for my very own some day—my own dear little wife!"
